DYNAMITE GROUND TO SAVE TREES IS ADVICE

Dynamite the court house grounds and save the trees says W. G. Jones, president of the Texas Forestry association.

It is the belief of the forestry man that there is a hard crust beneath the surface of the court house lawn and by dynamiting it through to be absorbed by the soil and the result will be healthy trees.

The forestry man also advocates dynamiting the ground when trees are first planted. It's a custom followed in the hard-past section of California. He also advises that Bermuda grass be kept killed off for a distance of three feet away from the tree. Bermuda grass, he thinks rots the tree of moisture it would otherwise get.

Mr. Jones, accompanied by Mrs. Jones and daughter, passed through Amarillo Tuesday on their way to Boulder, Colo., where they are in the habit of spending the summers.
